

Surgical and Prosthetic Management of Implants in the Esthetics Zone: Lessons Learned over 30 years.

Course Synopsis

Achieving ideal anterior implant esthetics is a challenging and demanding task for any clinician and demands a complete understanding of the biologic and physiologic limitations of soft and hard tissues and their interaction with prosthetic biomaterials. Creating implant restorations with harmonious gingival contour that emulate nature requires a fusion of science and art. This lecture will emphasize that diagnosis and treatment planning, and judicious surgical, prosthetic and orthodontic managements of soft and hard tissue are the foundation to achieve optimal anterior implant esthetics. Long-term follow-up, over 30 years, documenting success, failures and complications will be presented so that participants can learn how to incorporate predictability in simple and complex esthetic situations they encounter in their practices.

The course is designed for prosthodontists, oral and maxillofacial surgeons, periodontists, general dentists, laboratory technicians and allied staff. It will focus on current implant treatment philosophies and methodologies for replacing missing anterior teeth and the interdisciplinary management of patients.

Educational & Learning Objectives:

Following the discussion, participants will:

Understand a systematic approach for the management of anterior esthetic implant cases learned over 30 years of experience.

Learn how to incorporate a sound understanding of soft tissue anatomy, biology wound healing and esthetics in anterior implant cases.

Understand that all cases are not created equal, but that diagnosis and treatment planning, as well as surgical, prosthetic and orthodontic managements are key to successful outcomes.
