SMD faculty with research appointments, e.g., Research Assistant Professor, play important and often unique roles in our medical center. Some have wondered about other potential career paths in our School, including Staff Scientist positions and academic (so-called tenure-track) appointments such as Assistant Professor. In response to such questions, we are offering this educational session.

This session will provide an overview of those different types of positions and career paths, and offer an opportunity for interactive discussion with the attendees. The session will be of most interest to faculty members currently holding research appointments and to faculty supervisors and Principal Investigators who supervise or mentor research-appointed faculty members.

At the conclusion of this session, participants will be able to:

1. Appreciate potential career paths for SMD faculty with research appointments.

Intended audience: SMD faculty members with research appointments (e.g., Research Assistant Professor); faculty supervisors and Principal Investigators who supervise or mentor research-appointed faculty members.
