

Kim Griswold, MD, MPH, RN, FAAFP

Associate Professor of Family Medicine, Psychiatry, and Public Health and Health Professions
Jacobs School of Medicine and Biomedical Sciences - University of Buffalo

Dr. Griswold is an associate professor at University at Buffalo's Jacobs School of Medicine and Biomedical Sciences with appointments in family medicine, psychiatry, and public health and the health professions. She trained as a nurse before going to medical school and has a long-standing interest in the primary care of underserved populations.

Kim began doing canine therapy in the 1990's with her Labradors, and with Marilyn Kregal as a co-founder of Canine Therapy Teams of WNY – canine therapy in disaster situations. The Canine Therapy Teams have served during the aftermath of the Flight 3407 plane crash, during several severe snow storms at Command Operations, and with veterans suffering from PTSD.
