News for friends of the Medical Center.

Art at the bedside of cancer patients is good medicine

The simple distraction of looking at art and discussing it helped bring calm to a group of patients at the Wilmot Cancer Institute—and also provided moments of Zen for the medical student who led the study.

Honor Our Nurses

Nurses are the heart of our health care teams. Every day, they're making crucial care decisions, supporting families, and saving lives. Through the University's new Honor a Nurse campaign, you can go online to leave a special thank you message for a nurse who has made a difference in your life. Donations can also be made to a special fund that will support continuing education for URM and affiliate nurses as well as School of Nursing students. In celebration of National Nurses Week 2022, join Dean Kathy Rideout and School of Nursing associate deans for an engaging virtual panel on the future of the School of Nursing on May 9.

It's April Fools Day! Meet Makenna.

She loves a good prank. She even left a book of pranks for kids to play on their nurses at one of her last inpatient treatments. Here she is pranking one of her favorite nurses, our Nurse of the Year, Joe. 😄 We love that our patients and staff have fun together. Laughter is truly a wonderful medicine. Read more about her story below. 📖

Makenna was diagnosed with high grade osteosarcoma in March 2021. Throughout 2021 she had about a hundr... See more
